The Baby and the Bathwater

by James Gilmore

Thursday, 23-Feb-2012 at 7:30 PM, room LS-3 on the Weed campus

The use of digital versus film photography has been a topic of debate since the invention of digital cameras towards the end of the 20th Century. Both digital and film photography have advantages and drawbacks. Twenty-first century photography is dominated by digital operation, but the older photochemical methods continue to serve many users and applications. Please join us for this 4th presentation of the 2011-2012 COS Speakers Series.

James Gilmore is in his 12th year teaching photography and computer arts at COS. His photography has been exhibited nationally and his work is represented in museum and private collections across the US. Gilmore received his M.F.A. from the Philadelphia College of Art & Design, and currently makes images using analog, digital and hybrid formats.
